

CONCLUSION

The Unitarian Society of Germantown has long established itself as a diverse spiritual and social center of Philadelphia's northwestern neighborhoods. In order to provide its families and its community with the finest religious and spiritual education and to continue to provide the highest quality of outreach activities to its members and to the community as a whole, the Church must take steps to plan for its future and improve its facilities.

This Master Plan study has attempted to understand the mission and goals of the Church, to become familiar with the condition of the present facility, to observe how it is currently used and to explore the various ways the facility can be changed to help the Church achieve its mission and meet its goals. The methodology used to gather information and to solicit the widest range of ideas and opinions from the Church leadership and from the congregation has been inclusive and collaborative.

It is the objective of this Master Plan that the proposed expansion and renovation will allow the Church to improve and expand its programs and its ability to outreach to the surrounding community, thereby strengthening USG's ability to grow and flourish for years to come. The information in this Master Plan provides USG with a coherent, organized blueprint to accommodate the anticipated growth during the next twenty years.
